

About the Executive Director

DAVID F. BOMKE

As the Executive Director of the New York Energy Consumers Council, Inc. (NYECC), David F. Bomke bears primarily responsibility for the implementation of the Council's twin missions of advocacy and education for major energy consumers buying energy in the five boroughs of New York City and Westchester County. Since its establishment in 2004 by the consolidation of the Owners' Committee on Electric Rates, Inc. and the New York Energy Buyers Forum, the NYECC has helped save energy consumers $1.5 billion in electric rate increases and $109 million in steam rate increases.

Recent seminars presented under Mr. Bomke's management include a presentation on energy leadership, featuring keynote speaker former Mayor Rudolph Giuliani; Kevin Burke, Chairman of Con Edison; Marolyn Davenport, Senior Vice President of the Real Estate Board of New York; Ashok Gupta, Director of the Air & Energy Program at the Natural Resources Defense Council; and Peter Smith, President of the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority.

Mr. Bomke's professional preparation for his present responsibilities includes sixteen years in the field of professional facilities management, initially for Facilities Resource Management Co. (FRM) and subsequently for ARAMARK Facility Services (AFS). Responsibilities included the development of an automated service response system and assorted financial management controls for the School Board of Sarasota County, Florida, as well as the development and implementation of a broad range of management protocols at The New School, Rockefeller University, and Vassar College, and other academic institutions in New York and New England. His career with FRM/AFS also included more than a dozen years helping the New York State Office of Mental Health reduce its energy consumption by more than 60% and avoid spending more than $135 million.

At present, Mr. Bomke serves on the New York City Energy Policy Task Force, the Systems Benefits Charge Advisory Board of the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority, the Advisory Board of the Greater New York Construction Users Council, and the Board of the Manhattan Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Bomke earned his Bachelor of Arts degree cum laude from MacMurray College in Jacksonville, Illinois and pursued graduate studies at Rice University in Houston, Texas before beginning his professional career. He worked in such diverse fields as Library Sciences, office supply warehousing, employment testing and training, adult education and public school curriculum development and worked in Texas, New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Florida before moving to New York State in 1991. Mr. Bomke has worked full time in New York City since 2004. He and his wife have maintained a home in southwest Connecticut since 1994, where his wife owns and directs Cheshire Dance Centre. They enjoy the proximity of their children and grandchildren in Connecticut and Massachusetts.